FINDING THE MAIN IDEA #1

Name:

Just once Harriet wanted to earn a perfect score on her spelling test. She had never gotten all the words correct before. She tried so hard, but the letters just seemed to mix up on the page.

This week Harriet had a new plan. She would study so hard that she would memorize every letter in every word. She thought this would keep the letters from mixing up in her brain.

When the test started Harriet fell behind. She could not keep up as she tried to remember all the letters in order. She started to sweat. Harriet knew she needed a new strategy. Maybe next week she would get that perfect score.

"Mom!" Jordan yelled. "Caleb is standing in my window again. He won't stop staring at me. Please do something."

Mom let out a big sigh. Caleb lived next door. He was always trying to come over. Caleb was only 6-years-old. He did not understand that he should wait to be invited.

"I will go talk to him," mom said. She walked outside and yelled for Caleb to come.

Caleb ran to the front door. He tried to walk right in the house. "Hold on," mom said. "Caleb, I know you like coming over to play. We like to have you here. But sometimes we are busy doing other things. We cannot have you over to play all the time. I will send Jordan over to invite you and then you can come to play."

Caleb learned to wait for an invitation.

FINDING THE MAIN IDEA #6

Everyone has opinions about things. But the facts are stronger than opinions. Facts are true and can be proven. Here are some crazy facts I bet you didn't know were actually real and true.

A crocodile cannot stick out its tongue. All crocodiles have a membrane (a thing layer that is formed around a part of a living thing) that makes their tongue stuck to the top of their mouth!

It is impossible for most people to lick their elbow. If you don't believe me, try it!

It is a fact that it is absolutely impossible for pigs to look up at the sky. The way pigs' neck muscles are made stops them from looking up.

Just like fingerprints, everyone's tongue print is different.

It is fun to learn new amazing facts!
